Irrigation

If you're tired of spending evenings standing in your garden, hose in hand, a sprinkler systems that is integrated into your lawn saves you time and money, not to mention water! By factoring in the climate, NaturEscape Inc. can optimize your watering schedule.

We've been operating in long enough to understand how to best coordinate irrigation systems; by factoring in temperature and rainfall, a NaturEscape Inc.-installed and maintained irrigation system will save you water while still keeping your lawn green.

NaturEscape Inc.'s sprinkler systems are well-integrated into the existing landscape, so you don't have to worry about them sticking out like sore thumbs. You won't even notice they're there, but what you will notice is how healthy and green your lawn looks, thanks to your new sprinklers!

Which System is For You?

The right irrigation system for you depends on what you're aiming to deliver hydration to. High and low flow are the two main categories for sprinkler systems, and depending on your garden you can use one of these types, or a combination of both.

For example, if your plants only require a small amount of water over a long period of time, NaturEscape Inc. might recommend a drip system, which dispenses only a minimal amount of water, and can either be controlled manually or set up to an automatic system.

For thirstier plants, overhead sprinklers could be the right option. The major benefit of these systems comes from their even distribution of water. If you've ever noticed patches of grass that are brown and dry, while other areas are green and healthy, an overhead sprinkler could be the solution to your problems. Because they deliver a uniform amount of water to everything in their reach, no area of your lawn will receive more or less water than another area.
